Digital Image Collections

The Visual Resources Center is dedicated to the support of teaching and research at the University of Delaware. Our digital image collections illustrate the global history of art and architecture from prehistory to the present, and are always available online to current University of Delaware faculty, staff, and students in all disciplines. The Visual Resources Center's staff is here to assist members of the University of Delaware community in the creation and use of digital media.

ARTSTOR

All current University of Delaware faculty, staff, and students have access to these digital collections, which are available in Artstor:

- The Artstor Digital Library contains millions of images covering the arts, architecture, the humanities, and the sciences, and includes many of the most familiar works of art taught in Art History courses.
- JSTOR Forum allows the University of Delaware to integrate its own local content into Artstor. The Visual Resources Center's Institutional Collection in Artstor is available exclusively to UD users.
- Other University of Delaware Institutional Collections in Artstor include images of objects in the University of Delaware Library, Museums, and Press.
- The Archivision Research Library contains images of architecture, parks, gardens, and works of public art.
- Artstor's open-access Public Collections make many of the University of Delaware's images available to anyone worldwide.

All images in the Visual Resources Center's collection are subject to copyright law.
